

GERALD LONG
Project Coordinator

Gerald Long believes that businesses can help shape a better world, which is why he truly values his work with Deconstruction & Building Materials ReUse Network, Inc. (Deconstruction Network.) As Project Manager, Long is able to work with likeminded homeowners, contractors, and nonprofit partners to reclaim building materials from homes in the Bay Area and recycle the salvaged items right back into the community. His work insures that all parties involved with the process, as wells as community members, benefit from deconstruction.

A native of Griffin, Georgia, a small town outside of Atlanta, Gerald moved to Northern California in 1985. For several years Gerald worked in various environments; including stints as a Restaurant Manager, Technician, and Sales Consultant. All of his work allowed him to utilize his training in management, sales, and marketing, but Gerald did not find his true niche until 2005 when he began working in the Reuse and Deconstruction Industry. For the first time, he felt like he was in a job where he had the opportunity to really make a difference.

Gerald, an eternal optimist, is inspired by his mother and the careers of positive business leaders like Warren Buffet, Tom Monaghan, and Ken Behring. In the future Gerald would like to devote more time volunteering in and around the Bay Area, much like the business-minded philanthropists he admires.
